PREFACE

SINCE the appearance of the fourth edition of Theodor Bergk's Poetae Lyrici Graeci, in which they form the third volume, the Lyric Fragments, or as they are more accurately called, the Melic Fragments, have not been published complete. The last forty years, thanks mainly to the work of the Egypt Exploration Fund and similar societies, have added very notably to our slender store, and a new edition has been long overdue. My book will, I hope, go some way to supply the want. It is complete in the sense that its sole omissions are fragments which have only palaeographical value, and it contains all that is really necessary by way of exegesis. In all places where the text adopted would otherwise be misleading I have given critical notes, save only where I have already discussed the reading in one or other of the classical periodicals. Many scholars—and to say this is not to depreciate a great work, for such things depend on the point of view—must have found Bergk lacking in two respects. First, when so little is known of these great figures of antiquity, all that little has value for us if they are to seem things of flesh and blood and not the mere subjects of a lesson in translation. With the single exception of Sappho's, the Fragments alone are not enough. I have therefore included, unlike Bergk, the chief passages of ancient literature which throw light on the life and personality of the poets and their literary reputation in antiquity—not making an exception of Sappho; for the clear-drawn self-poet that she gives us in her Fragments is so precious that its very frame is of surpassing interest. To these 'Lives' I have added the ancient accounts of such early poet-musicians as Olympus and Thaletas, partly to serve in some sort as an introduction to the subject, and partly in order to avoid creating the impression that only the poets of whom some work is extant are of any importance to the student of Greek poetry. Secondly, if these mere quotations are to have more than linguistic interest, in nine cases out of ten they want explanation, and in at least five of those nine the explanation may be had from the context in which they are found. Beigk appears to have regarded the contexts as a necessary evil, and has not only relegated them to the footnotes but has made them less useful than they might have been by cutting them as short as he possibly could. I have thought it better to give full contexts in the body of the page, printing them, however, in small type so that the reader may the more easily omit them if he will.

A feature peculiar to this edition is the inclusion of a considerable number of restorations made exempli gratia of passages preserved only in paraphrase. These restorations, as well as those of the new Fragments, are mainly my own. The reader should clearly understand that in many cases where he finds square brackets, and all where he finds 'e.g.,' or 'e.g.' and a vertical line, he is dealing with restorations which, though they are far from being mere guesses, are only approximations to the truth. Similar warnings are sometimes conveyed by dots and pointed brackets. A dot placed beneath a letter means that that letter is a possible interpretation of the traces, a pointed bracket indicates that the letters within it are not or cannot have been in the MS. The emendations and restorations for which I believe myself to be responsible are marked E in the notes. All restorations have been checked where possible by a palaeographical method explained and exemplified in various articles in the periodicals. Briefly, it consists of the tracing of letter-groups from photographs of the extant portions of the papyrus or vellum MS. Suggestions are rejected which, when traced out by this method, are shown, with all reasonable allowance made for variation in the size of the letters and the spaces between them, to exceed or fall short of the requirements of the gap; and where the gap is bounded on the left by an imaginary marginal line, all suggestions are made to correspond—again with all reasonable allowance made—in what I may call for convenience ‘written length’. Scholars who have not tried this method will be surprised, when they do, at the way in which it reduces the possibilities. One instance must suffice. In the first lines of Alcaeus 27, the letters Δ of παί]δων, ΑΙ of πρῶ]τα, ΤΟ before γάρ, and ΙC of ἄλλ]αις, come immediately under one another. Metre requires two supplementary syllables in lines 1 and 2, three in line 3, and one in line 4. All these supplements must correspond in written length not only with one another but with any suggestions made for the four subsequent lines, and when they are made the result must be not only a passage satisfactory in metre, grammar, dialect and sentiment, but something which Alcaeus might have written. I should add here that so far as I have found it practicable my work on the new Fragments is based on the actual MSS, where I have used only photographs the results should be taken as still requiring corroboration. The latter cases are indicated in the footnotes.

PREFACE

The arrangement of the Fragments follows, where this can be inferred, the arrangement of the editions current in the later antiquity, but it must not be understood as certainly reproducing it. Cross-references to the numerations of Bergk and Hiller-Crusius will be found on page 431. I have added a separate index of the ancient authors, including those to whom we are indebted for most of our knowledge of these poets and their works. Among the modern writers who have collected, emended, and interpreted the Fragments, next to Bergk¹ and those on whom he drew—Ahrens, Bekker, Benseler, Bentley, Blomfield,² Boissonade, Brunck, Cobet, Cramer, Gaisford, Hartung, Hecker, Hermann, Keil, Kock, Matthiae, Meineke, O. Müller, Nauck, Neue, Pearson, Reiske, Schneidewin,³ Schweighäuser,⁴ Seidler, Ursinus, Volger, Voss, Welcker, Wolf—I owe most to B. P. Grenfell, A. S. Hunt, Kaibel and U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf. My obligations to these, as to other recent and living scholars, are indicated in the notes. I must here record my thanks to the Director of the British Museum for permission to reproduce the Sotades vase, and to the Council of the Egypt Exploration Fund for allowing me to print the Oxyrhynchus Fragments; to D. Bassi, J. Harrower, W. Schubart, and the Directors of the Bibliothèque Nationale and of Graz University, for supplying me with photographs of papyri and other MSS in their care. And I gratefully acknowledge the help and encouragement I have received from Mrs. Adam, H. I. Bell, S. G. Campbell, A. B. Cook, R. D. Hicks, H. Rackham and A. J. B. Wace.

An account of the MS tradition when the authors concerned run into the sixties is a formidable affair, and would be beyond the scope of this book. For the most important, the scholar will find much of what he requires in O. Hoffmann's Griechische Dialekte and in the introduction to A. C. Pearson's Fragments of Sophocles. The earlier history of the text has been ably worked out by Wilamowitz in the works mentioned in the Bibliography. But it should be borne in mind that statements on the Aeolic metres and dialect published before 1914 may need modification. I cannot hope that the many references in this book are quite exhaustive, modern, and correct. But I have done my best to make them so. A few not quite obvious errors, of which the worst is Alexandrides for Anaxandrides on pp. 100 and 101, will be found corrected in the Indexes. In the translation of Sappho fr. 35 the proverb should be in square brackets. The omitted fragments of merely palaeographical value will be found in the Papyrius Collections—Oxyrhynchus, Berliner Klassiker-texte, Halle, Società Italiana. It will perhaps be useful to the reader to know that Volume II, which is already in the press, includes Stesichorus, Ibycus, Anacreon, and Simonides, and that Volume III, which is in preparation, will include Corinna, Bacchylides, Timotheus, the Scolia, the Folk-Songs, the Anacreontea, and the Adespota, with an account of Greek Lyric Poetry.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

THE need for a reprint of my first volume has given me the opportunity of revising it in the light of further discoveries and recent work. The XVth Oxyrhynchus volume has added much not only to what we possess of Lesbian literature but to our knowledge of its dialect and the editions used by the ancient scholars. Till it came, we did not even know, for instance, what Sappho said for 'he was,' and the existence of an alternative form is still doubted. The same book has thrown light on the orthography of the ancient texts. Whatever Sappho herself wrote—which is of course another story—it now looks as if one at least of the editions current in the later antiquity—if there were more than one—gave, for instance, κάλημι rather than κάλημι and σδ rather than ζ. But even if there ever were uniformity in the spelling, it is doubtful whether the time is yet ripe for an attempt to recover it, and in this edition the attempt has not been made.

The labours of Mr. Lobel,¹ in many ways a model of scholarship,² have contributed to our knowledge of the usages of these poets a good many probabilities but few, if any, certainties. To judge by an estimate based on the known length of the First Book of Sappho, we possess but five per cent. of the works known to the Grammarians, Meticians, and others who quote or discuss her; and there is no reason to suppose we have more of Alcaeus. To exclude the possibility, as Mr. Lobel does, of Sappho's having used the form $\gamma\alpha\hat{\iota}\alpha$ because she uses $\gamma\hat{\alpha}$ five times and never certainly $\gamma\alpha\hat{\iota}\alpha$, when Alcaeus has $\gamma\hat{\alpha}$ seven times and $\gamma\alpha\hat{\iota}\alpha$ twice, could in my opinion only be justified, in the circumstances, by proof of the existence of a much wider difference between the usages of the two poets than Mr. Lobel has been able to establish. To deny Sappho $\upsilon\delta\omega\rho$ in her only certain use of it when Alcaeus has $\upsilon\delta\omega\rho$ twice and $\bar{\upsilon}\delta\omega\rho$ once, is still more arbitrary. And this is not all. Many of Mr. Lobel's theses can only be upheld by disregarding evidence which, if not entirely above cavil, yet cannot be left out of account. For instance, of the metrical effective use of digamma in words other than pronouns and the like there is at least one sufficient case in each poet, and there are several passages where exceptions to his rule of the Dative Plural cannot be satisfactorily explained away.

¹ Σαπφούς Μέλη Oxford 1925 and Ἀλκαίου Μέλη Oxford 1927. ² see my criticisms in the Cambridge Review of 1926 p. 210 and 1928 p. 197.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

It should also be noted (and I say it—for I owe him much—merely because the high value of his work may blind the unwary to its defects) that in the Nereid Ode the need for a masculine antecedent makes it certain that ἵοτοιοι is $\delta\tau\omicron\iota\omicron\iota$ and not as Mr. Lobel claims, ἵο τοῖσι , in spite of the odds—five to one, or including Alcaeus ten to one—against the form with one τ ,¹ that his rejection of the beautiful

¹ the argument that $\delta\tau\omicron\iota\omicron\iota$ may be feminine is irrelevant; if τοῖσι could be, it would be a different thing

fragment Γέλλως παιδοφιλωτέρα is due to a misunderstanding of the usage of the author who quotes it, μέμνηται ταύτης Σαπφώ referring not to Gello but to the saying itself (παροιμία),¹ that his acceptance of the impossible word, words, or termination -οδερ in Ox Pap 1787 9 can only be due to a desire to deprive Sappho of an unaugmented δέρκει, an active use twice attested by Hesychius, and that his rule of the avoidance of hiatus between certain lines of certain metres was found at once to be broken by Sappho in the new fragment which he himself first printed in the addendum to his book.² The probabilities, however, remain, and it will be found that the changes I have made in my text after reading Mr. Lobel's editions are not confined to matters of palaeography

Of the thirty-six passages which owe their literary interest mainly to conjectural supplements, two 'restorations' have been proved, by the happy joining of new pieces, to be incorrect, but it should be noted that in one of these the supplements, being on the right, were 'uncontrolled' in length, and as an offset I have the vindication of my placing of βασιλῆϊω, against all other editors, in Sappho 83.³ In the reading of doubtful letters I have ventured on occasion, after seeing the Papyri again, still to differ sometimes from Professor Hunt, sometimes from Mr. Lobel, and sometimes, though rarely, from both. For it has more than once fallen to my lot, after giving an expert good non-palaeographical reason why my proposed reading should after all be possible, to bring him round to my view

In spite of the new readings of doubtful letters, some of my 'restorations'—and among these I do not count the exempli gratia supplements, which are of course mere tours de force—are still unsatisfactory to their maker. I have tried to improve on my version of Sappho's Ode to the Nereids, in the light of Professor Bolling's equation κέγχρω = 'millet-seed' and Mr Lobel's ἐπαγορία for ἐπ' ἀγλαία, but without success. But it must be remembered that even the restorations which satisfy me, satisfy me, and have always done so,¹ only as makeshifts—which indeed is all they can be, in poetry written not only in a foreign tongue but in a dialect of it of which we know so little—; and when Herculaneum gives up its dead I shall listen unmoved to the cries of 'I told you so,' feeling then, as I feel now, that I only made the best—for me—of a bad job

Besides Mr Lobel's (L) editions of Sappho and Alcaeus, the last six years have seen the publication of Diehl's useful but ill-produced and sometimes injudicious Teubner Anthologia Lyrica, and C. R. Haines's more popular Sappho, the Poems and Fragments. Professor David Robinson's Sappho and her Influence I have criticised in the Classical Review for 1925, p. 104. Some of my new readings and restorations were discussed in papers read before the Cambridge Philological Society in 1927–8. These papers, with certain corrections and additions, will be published in the Society's Proceedings.

My reading of Sappho 1a having been called in question, I take the opportunity of printing the notes I made with the vase before me at Athens in 1925 (they refer to the last two words, which I have given as ἀλλ' ὀνάτων).—"ΛΛΟ Κ Τ.Λ. : these lines of letters curve up at the end, following the curve of the thumb; O· more likely A, but cf. O in ΠΤΕΡΟ-ΕΤΑ; A: more like T, but the up-curve (see above) might justify reading A; Ω more like I or H; wreath and lyre-strings entirely faded away, but visible in certain lights; [inscription below lyre] ΣΑΠΠΩΣ?" It will be seen that the weak point is the Ω; but on consulting my enlarged photographs, in which the strokes of the brush are clearly visible, I still think with Mr. Wace [C. Q. 1922 p 3] that it is possible.

My thanks are due to the Egypt Exploration Society for permission to print certain fragments first published in Vols. XV and XVII of the Oxyrhynchus Papyri, to Professor A. S. Hunt not only for allowing me to include the same fragments, but for permitting me to examine the Papyri and helping me in doubtful places by word of mouth or letter, to Mr. E. Lobel for verifying certain readings in the Papyri now in the Bodleian Library, to Dr. Schubart for supplying me with a photograph of the new Berlin Fragment of Sappho, and to many Cambridge friends for their criticism, help, and encouragement.

Plutarch On Music: Alexander in his Collections on Phrygia declares that instrumental music was introduced into Greece by Olympus and by the Idaean Dactyls or Priests of Cybelè. The first flute-player according to him was Hyagnis, who was followed by his son Marsyas, who was succeeded by Olympus.

The Same: [on flute-sung 'nomes']: We are told that the Olympus of whom we spoke just now, a flute-player from Phrygia, composed a flute-nome² to Apollo which is known as the Many-Headed. This Olympus, however, is said by some authorities to have been a descendant of the first Olympus, son of Marsyas, who composed the nomes to the Gods.—This earlier Olympus was in his boyhood a favourite of Marsyas, and learning flute-playing of him, introduced the musical nomes² into Greece, where they are now used at the festivals of the Gods.—According to another account, however, the Many-Headed nome is the work of Crates 'a pupil of Olympus,' though Pratinas declares it to be the work of Olympus the Second. It is held, however, by some writers that the Harmatian nome was a Mysian invention, Mysia having produced flute-players in ancient times.

Plutarch On Music: According to Aristoxenus, musicians ascribe the invention of the Enharmonic scale (EE'FABB'CE)¹ to Olympus. Before his time the only scales had been the Diatonic and the Chromatic. The invention is supposed to have come about thus. In descending in the Diatonic scale his melody frequently passed from B or from A to F, omitting G. Realising the beauty of this effect, Olympus in his astonishment accepted the principle for the whole system, and composed in it in the Dorian 'mode,' rejecting all intervals peculiar to the Diatonic or Chromatic scales and concerning himself directly with the mode. Such was the origin of his Enharmonic scale . . . It is clear that Olympus made a real advance in music by introducing an entire novelty, and was the father of good music in Greece.

The Same We are told by Aristoxenus in the first Book of his Treatise on Music that the first flute-player to use the Lydian mode was Olympus in his Lament for the serpent Python have invented not only the Enharmonic scale but the two rhythms known as the Prosodiac (—υ), which is that of the Nome of Ares, and the Choree (υυυ) which occurs so frequently in the tunes used in the worship of Cybelè. The Bacchius (υ—) also is sometimes ascribed to him¹ These statements are borne out by each of the ancient melodies.

Plutarch On Music: Take for instance the Enharmonic scale employed by Olympus with the Phrygian mode and the Epibatic Paeon,² the combination which gives its character to the opening of the Nome to Athena. Both melody and rhythm make their contribution, the metre being merely changed in a cunning way so as to become as it were trochaic instead of paeonic, and the effect is completed by the use of the Enharmonic scale of Olympus.

The Same: Moreover, although the ancient poets used only some of the 'modes,' they knew them all. It is not through ignorance that they confine themselves to employing so few strings,³ or that composers like Olympus and Terpander and their followers denied themselves the use of many strings and the variety which that entails. This is clear both from the works of Olympus and Terpander and those of the composers who belong to the same school. Though they are quite simple and written only for a few strings, they so far excel the elaborate works written for many, that the style of Olympus remains inimitable and the exponents of the opposite principle have to take the second place.

The district of Corinth, which is part of the district of Argos, has its name from Corinthus, who to the best of my belief is seriously called a son of Zeus only by the local if loud authority of the inhabitants. Eumēlus son of Amphilytus of what is known as the house of the Bacchids, the reputed author of the epic poem (Corinthiaca), declares in the Corinthian History, if indeed his title to this is not false, that this country was first settled by Ephyra daughter of Oceanus . .

1 PROCESSIONAL TO DELOS

Pausanias Description of Greece [on Messenia]. In the reign of Phintas son of Sybotas the Messenians first sent a sacrifice and a male chorus to Apollo at Delos. Their trainer in the processional song to the God was Eumēlus, and the epic lines they sang are believed to be the only genuine work of Eumelus now extant.

The Same [on Ithōmē]: The Messenians hold a yearly festival (of Zeus Ithomatas) called the Ithomaea. In ancient times they had a musical contest too, as is testified, among other things, by the lines of Eumelus, who wrote in his Processional to Delos.

For he of Ithome taketh delight in a Muse that hath a pure lyre and weareth the sandals of freedom.²

LIFE

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner : When Poseidonius says this, he does not realise that the magadis is an ancient instrument, because Pindar plainly states that Terpander invented the barbitos or lyre to respond¹ to the Lydian pectis or lute, in the words 'Which Lesbian Terpander invented of old to vibrate in answer to the low-pitched lute at the feasts of the Lydians;' and the pectis and the magadis are the same . . . It is clear that Terpander was earlier than Anacreon from the following considerations. According to Hellanicus both in his metrical and in his formal lists of Victors at the Carneian Festival, the first recorded name is Terpander's; and we know from Sosibius' Chronology that the festival was founded in the 26th Olympiad (B.C. 676-673), while Hieronymus' tract On Singers to the Lyre, which forms the fifth Book of his Treatise on the Poets, assigns him to the time of the lawgiver Lycurgus, who is admitted on all hands to have arranged with Iphitus of Elis the first Olympic Games reckoned in the list (B.C. 776) and changed the style of music 381 years, in the archonship of Dropides at Athens (B.C. 645).

Eusebius Chronicle: Olympiad 33. 2 (B.C. 647)
 Flourished Terpander the singer to the lyre.

Timotheus Persae: In the beginning did Orpheus son of Calliopè beget the motley-musicked shell on Mount Pieria, and after him came the famous Terpander, born of Aeolian Lesbos at Antissa, and yoked the Muse unto poems ten. And lo' now Timotheus giveth the lyre new life with times and measures of eleven stings

Aristotle Problems. Why is the octave described as diapason or 'at an interval of all,' rather than numerically 'at an interval of eight,' as we say 'at an interval of four' or 'of five'? Is it because the strings were in old times seven, and Terpander removed the 'third' when he added the netè or 'highest,' thus keeping the total seven and not increasing it to eight?¹

Plutarch on Music. The musical historians attributed the Dorian nete or octave-note to Terpander, musicians before him not having employed it

The 'Same [on Timotheus]: Down to the time of Aristocleides the lyre had had seven stings. Timotheus divided the Terpandrean mode into a greater number of notes.²

LIFE OF TERPANDER

Homer—Euryphon—Boeus of Phocis—Terpander, a lyric poet who invented the lyre of seven strings and, pace those who ascribe this to Philammon, was the first writer of lyric ‘nomes’

Plutarch on Music [see on Olympus p 8].

The Same: According to Heracleides’ Collections on the Musicians, the art of singing to the lyre and the kind of poetry which belongs to it were the invention of Amphion son of Zeus and Antiopè, who presumably was taught by his father. His authority is the register preserved at Sicyon, from which he derives his lists of the priestesses at Aigos, the poets, and the musicians. Of the same generation, according to him, were Linus . . . , Anthes . . . , Pierus . . . , Philammon . . . , Thamyris . . . , Demodocus . . . , and Phemius. . . . These poets’ writings were not in prose, but resembled those of Stesichorus and the old lyric poets who wrote epic lines and set them to music. Even Terpander, he declares, whose forte was the citharoedic or lyre-sung nome, and to whom he ascribes the naming of these nomes, in every one of them set his own and Homer’s epic lines to music for singing at the Games. In the same way Clonas, the first composer of flute-sung nomes and the originator of processional songs, used elegiac and epic verse . . . of Terpander, were first named by him, and were these: Boeotian, Aeolian, Trochaic, High-pitched, Cepion, Teipandrean, and Four-song. Terpander also wrote lyric Preludes in epic metre, and it becomes clear that the ancient lyre-sung nomes were composed of epic lines, if we consider that Timotheus, when he employed the dithyrambic style, interspersed his earlier nomes with them, in order to avoid the appearance of breaking the rules of the ancient music. There is reason to believe that Terpander was supreme in the art of the lyre-song. It is recorded that he won the prize at the Pythian Games four times running; and the period at which he lived must have been very early, because Glaucus the Italian in his History of the Ancient Poets and Musicians puts him before Archilochus, making him only a very little later than the first composers for the flute.

Alexander, in his Collections on Phrygia, declares that instrumental music was introduced into Greece by Olympus, and also by the Idaean Dactyls or Priests of Cybelè, and that while the first flute-player was Hyagnis, who was followed by his son Marsyas, who was succeeded by Olympus, Terpander (the lyrist) emulated in his verse Homer and in his music Orpheus, who appears to have been entirely original . . . It is said that some of the citharoedic or lyre-sung nomes thought to be the work of Terpander were really composed by the ancient Delphian composer Philammon.

In fine, lyric song continued from Terpander's time to that of Phrynis to be wholly simple. Poets were not permitted in those days to compose for the lyre as they do now with frequent change of mode or rhythm. They maintained in the nomes the scale proper to each, which indeed is the reason of that name, these compositions being called 'nomes' or 'laws' because it was not permitted to go beyond the proper scale. As soon as the performer had done his duty by the Gods, he passed on to the poetry of Homer and other poets. This is proved by the Preludes of Terpander. As for the form of the lyre, that was established in the time of Cepion the pupil of Terpander, and it was called 'Asian' because it was used in Lesbos which is adjacent to Asia. The last Lesbian lyrist to win the prize at the Spartan Carnea was Pericleitus. His death put an end to the continuous succession of Lesbian singers to the lyre.

The Same: Orthian and Trochaic Nomes. The two nomes so called from their rhythms by Terpander. They were high-pitched and of a vigorous character . . .

Plutarch on Music. Further, Pindar tells us that Terpander was the inventor of scolia or drinking-songs.

LIFE OF TERPANDER

Plutarch on Music. Something also should be said about rhythms. For there have been innovations in the form or kind of rhythms, and indeed of methods of metre and rhythm. Terpander first broke new ground by introducing into music a beautiful style of rhythm called after him the Terpandrean. Polymnastus who followed him employed a new rhythm as well as his, but preserved throughout the same beautiful style . . .

The Same: The first establishment of music at Sparta was due to Terpander.

The Same: Many circumstances could be cited to show that good music has been a matter for concern to the best-regulated states, and not least among these the quelling of a sedition at Sparta by Terpander.

Aelian Historical Miscellanes. The Spartans, whose bent was for bodily exercises and feats of arms, had no skill in music. Yet if ever they required the aid of the Muses on occasion of general sickness of body or mind or any like public affliction, their custom was to send for foreigners, at the bidding of the Delphic oracle, to act as healers or purifiers. For instance they summoned Terpander, Thales, Tyrtæus, Nymphaeus of Cydonia, and Alcman.

Suidas Lexicon. Next to the poet of Lesbos: Said proverbially of persons who come off second best. The singers to the lyre first called in by the Spartans were of Lesbos. When their city was torn by faction there was an oracle delivered that they should fetch the poet of Lesbos, and accordingly they sent for Terpander of Antissa, who was living in exile at

Sparta because of a murder, and listening to his music at their public dinners, ceased their factious strife. Another account is this. The Spartans at a time of internecine struggles sent to Lesbos for the musician Terpander, who restored harmony to their minds and put an end to the strife of parties; and so whenever after that time the Spartans listened to a musician, the saying went 'Next to the poet of Lesbos' This proverb is mentioned by Cratinus in his Cheiron

Aelius Dionysius quoted by Eustathius. Aristotle in his Constitution of Sparta declares that in the saying 'Next to the poet of Lesbos' the reference is to Terpander, and it is said that the Spartans used to summon to take his place of honour¹ first his descendants, then any Lesbian poet present, and the rest as they came, 'after the poet of Lesbos,' that is after any poet that came from Lesbos Palatine Anthology Tryphon on the lyrist Terpes² . . .

When in the Spartan Place of Meeting Terpes was singing a song to the thrumming of his sweet lyre, he perished never to return, not by a sword, nor yet an arrow, but by the casting of a fig between his lips. Alas! Death suffers from no lack of pretexts.

Plutarch Life of Lycurgus. Thus it is said that later during the Theban invasion of Laconia the Helot prisoners refused to sing at the bidding of their captors the songs of Terpander or Alcman or Spondon the Laconian, on the plea that their masters never allowed it.

Dionysius of Halicarnassus Composition [on rhythms]. The rhythm which consists entirely of long syllables—called molossus by the writers on metre—is elevated and dignified and takes long strides, and this is an example of it:

Strabo Geography [on Methymna]: Arion was a singer to the lyre; and according to tradition the same branch of music had an exponent in a native of the same island, Terpander, who was the first to use a lyre with seven strings instead of four, as is recorded in the epic lines ascribed to him:

To thee we will play new hymns upon a lyre of seven strings, and will love the four-voiced lay no more²

Plutarch Life of Lycurgus: Indeed if the reader will consider the Laconian poetry of which some is still extant and the march-rhythms the Spartans used to the tune of the flute when they went into battle, he will conclude that both Terpander and Pindar have good reason to connect valour with music as the former does where he says of Sparta:

Where bloom both the spear of the young men and the clear sweet Muse, and eke that aider unto noble deeds, Justice that goeth in broad streets . . .³

THALETAS OR THALES

LIFE

Diogenes Laertius Life of Thales the Philosopher. According to Demetrius of Magnesia in his Men of the Same Name, there have been five others of this name, of whom . . . the third belongs to very ancient times, namely those of Hesiod, Homer, and Lycurgus.¹

Plutarch Life of Lycurgus: One of the men who had a name in Crete for wisdom and statesmanship Lycurgus prevailed on by favour and friendship to go to Sparta. This was Thales, who was ostensibly a composer of songs for the lyre but did the work of a lawgiver of the best sort. For his songs were exhortations to lawabidingness and concord made by means of melodies and rhythms themselves marked by order and tranquillity.

Ephorus quoted by Strabo Geography [on the Cretans]. Similarly the rhythms they use in their songs are Cretan, the grave and severe rhythms invented by Thales, to whom moreover they ascribe the Paeans and other native songs as well as many of their customs.

Pausanias Description of Greece: Thales who stayed the plague at Sparta . . . was a native of Gortyn according to Polymnastus of Colophon, who composed some epic lines on him for the Spartans.

Aelian Historical Miscellany [see above on Terpander, p. 27].

Plutarch On Music. The first establishment of music at Sparta was due to Terpander. The second is best ascribed to Thaletas of Gortyn, Xenodamus . . ., Xenocritus . . ., Polymnastus . . ., and Sacadas. For we are told that the Feast of Naked Youths at Sparta¹ . . . was due to these musicians . . . Thaletas, Xenodamus, and Xenocritus were composers of Paeans.

LIFE OF THALETAS OR THALES

Plutarch on Music: Many circumstances could be cited to show that good music has been a matter of concern to the best-regulated states, and not least among these the quelling of a rising at Sparta by Terpander . . . And according to Pratinas, Thaletas the Cretan who is said to have been invited thither at the instance of the Delphic oracle to heal the Spartans by his music, rid their city of the plague which ravaged it.

The Same: As for Thaletas of Crete, it is doubted whether he composed Paeans Glaucus, who puts him later than Archilochus, declares that he imitated that poet with the difference that his songs were longer and he employed the Paeonic and Cretic rhythms. These had not been used by Archilochus, nor indeed by Orpheus or Terpander, but are said to have been derived by Thaletas, who thus showed himself a great poet, from the flute-music of Olympus.

Porphyrus Life of Pythagoras: He used to amuse himself alone in his own house of a morning by singing certain ancient paeans of Thales to his own accompaniment on the lyre.

POLYMNASTUS

LIFE

Strabo Geography [on Colophon]: According to Pindar, Polymnastus was one of the famous musicians ; for he says : 'Thou knowest the world-wide saying of Polymnastus the man of Colophon' ¹

Plutarch On Music: What was done in the lyric sphere by Terpander was done in that of the flute by Clonas, the first composer of flute-sung nomes and of processional songs : he used elegiac and epic verse. His successor Polymnastus of Colophon followed his example. The nomes of these flute-poets, my excellent Onesicrates, were sung to the flute, and are called the Apothetus or Special, the Elegy or Lament, the Comaichius or Rout-Leader's, the Schoenion or Rope-Song, the Cepion or Garden-Song, the Duge, and the Three-part. To these were added afterwards the Polymnastian Songs, as they are called.

The Same : The successor of Terpander and Clonas is given as Archilochus. But some historians make out that Ardalus of Troezen composed music for flute and voice before the time of Clonas, and that the poet Polymnastus son of Meles of Colophon flourished before his day and composed the Polymnastian nome. The claim of Clonas to be the author of the Special nome and the Rope-Song is borne out by the compilers of the registers, and Polymnastus is mentioned by two of the lyric poets, Pindar and Alcman.

Pausanias Description of Greece: The Thales who stayed the plague at Sparta . . . according to Polymnastus of Colophon, who composed some epic lines upon him for the Spartans, was a native of Gortyn.

Plutarch On Music: There were three modes employed by Polymnastus and Sacadas, the Dorian, the Phrygian, and the Lydian . . .

The Same: The first establishment of music at Sparta was due to Terpander. The second is best ascribed to Thaletas of Gortyn, Xenodamus of Cythera, Xenocritus of Locri, Polymnastus of Colophon, and Sacadas of Argos. For we are told that the institution of the Feast of Naked Youths at Sparta, of the Piovings in Arcadia, and of the Feast of Garments as it is called at Argos, was due to these musicians. Thaletas, Xenodamus, and Xenocritus were composers of Paeans, Polymnastus of the so-called Orthian or High-pitched Songs, and Sacadas of Elegies . . . Polymnastus, too, composed nomes to be sung to the flute. But whether, as the writers on the theory of music aver, he employed his musical powers upon the Orthian, in the absence of ancient testimony we cannot tell for certain.

The Same: Polymnastus is credited with the invention of what is now called the Hypolydian mode,

LIFE

Suidas Lexicon : Alcman :—A Laconian of Messoa, wrongly called by Crates a Lydian of Sardis. A lyric poet, the son of Damas or, according to some authorities, of Titarus. He flourished in the 37th Olympiad (B.C. 632–629), when Ardys father of Alyattes was king of Lydia. He was of an extremely amorous disposition and the inventor of love-poems, but by birth a slave. He wrote six Books of lyric poems, and was the first to adopt the practice of not accompanying the hexameter with music.¹ Being a Spartan, he uses the Doric dialect.

Aelian Historical Miscellanies [see above on Terpander, p. 27].

Velleius Paterculus Roman History : The Spartan claim to Alcman is false.

Palatine Anthology : Alexander of Aetolia :

Ancient Sardis, abode of my fathers, had I been reared in you I should have been a maund-bearer unto Cybelè or beat prattling tambours as one of her gilded eunuchs ; but instead my name is Alcman and my home Sparta, town of prize-tripods, and the lore I know is of the Muses of Helicon, who have made me a greater king even than Gyges son of Dascylus

The Same : Antipater of Thessalonica on Alcman :

LIFE OF ALCMAN

Judge not the man by the gravestone. The tomb you see is small, but it holds the bones of a great man. You shall know this for Alcmán, striker pre-eminent of the Laconian lyre, one possessed of the nine Muses.¹ And twin continents dispute whether he is of Lydia or Laconia; for the mothers of a minstrel are many

Heracleides of Pontus Constitutions: Alcmán was the slave of Agesídas, but received his freedom because he was a man of parts.²

Eusebius Chronicle: Olympiad 42. 2 (B.C. 611): Flourished Alcmán, according to some authorities.

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner [on garlands]· ‘Thyreatic’ :—This, according to Sosíbius in his tract On Sacrifices, is the name of a kind of garland at Sparta, made of palm-leaves, and known nowadays as psilinos. These garlands, he says, are worn in memory of the victory at Thyrea by the leaders of the choruses which dance on the festival of that victory, which coincides with the Gymnopaídae or Feast of Naked Youths. These choruses are three in number, the youths in front, the old men on the right, and the men on the left; and they dance naked, singing songs by Thaletas and Alcmán and the paeans of the Spartan Dionysodotus

Aristotle History of Animals [on the morbus pedicularis]: Mankind is liable to this disease when the body contains too much moisture, and several victims of it are recorded, notably the poet Alcmán and Pheicydes of Syros there are shrines of Alcimus and Enarsphorus and, close by, one of Dorceus, and adjoining this again one of Sebrus, all of whom are said to have been sons of Hippocoon. The spring near one of them is called Dorceian after Dorceus, and the plot near another, Sebrian after Sebrus. On the right of this plot is a monument to Alcman 'whose poems were not made the less sweet because he used the tongue of Spaita,' a dialect not too euphonious. The temples of Helen and Heracles lie the one near the tomb of Alcman, the other close to the wall. In the latter there is a statue of Heracles aimed, this form being due, it is said, to the fight he had with Hippocoon and his sons.

Scholast on Clement of Alexandria: There was a Spartan called Hippocoon whose sons, called after him the Hippocoonitids, killed in anger Oeonus son of Licymnius, a companion of Heracles, because he had killed a dog of theirs. Heracles' revenge was to levy war upon them, and he killed many of them and was wounded in the hand himself. The story is told by Alcman in his first Book.

Verily there is a vengeance from on high, and happy he that weaveth merrily one day's weft without a tear. And so, as for me, I¹ sing now of the light that is Agido's. amid the ambrosial night not as those heavenly Doves but brighter, aye even as Sirius himself.

For neither is abundance of purple defence enough,¹ nor speckled snake of pure gold, nor the Lydian wimple that adorns the sweet and soft-eyed maid, nor yet the tresses of our Nanno, nay nor Areta the goddess-like, nor Thylacis and Cleesithera, nor again shalt thou go to Aenesimbiota's and say 'Give me Astaphis and let me see Phyllyla, and Damareta and the lovely Ianthemis,' there is no need of that, for I am safe² with Hagesichora.

For is not the fair-ankled Hagesichora here present and abideth hard by Agido to commend our Thosteria³? Then O receive their prayers, ye Gods, for to the Gods belongeth the accomplishment. And for the end of my song I will tell you a passing strange thing. My own singing hath been nought; I that am a gul have yet shrieked like a very owl from the housetop—albeit 'tis the same girl's desire to please Aotis⁴ so far as in her lies, seeing the Goddess is the healer of our woe⁵—; 'tis Hagesichora's doing, hers alone, that the maidens have attained the longed-for peace⁶.

For 'tis true the others have run well beside her

2 A-C TO THE DIOSCURI

Stephanus of Byzantium Lexicon: Erysichè: A city of Acarnania . . . its adjective is 'Ερυσίχαιος 'Erysichaeon,' about which there is much discussion in the old writers. For Herodian says that 'Ερυσίχαιος is marked in our texts because it is accented proparoxytone though an ethnic adjective, and perhaps therefore it really contains χαιος 'a cowherd's staff' and the future of ἐρύω 'to draw'. It will be ambiguous then, as is clear, in Alcman near the beginning of the second of his Maiden-Songs, where he says:

No boor art thou nor a lubber, nor yet a tender of sties, nay nor Thessalian-born, nor Erysichaeon (or drag-staff), nor a keeper of sheep, but a man of highest Saïdis

"For if it is to be joined with 'Thessalian-born' it is an ethnic adjective and should be accented circumflex on the penultimate"—thus Herodian, in his Universal Prosody, and Ptolemaeus "but if it is connected with 'a keeper of sheep,' it is obvious that the accent should be acute on the last but two, and that it means 'cowherd' or 'goatherd,' an appellation which is properly followed by 'keeper of sheep.'"²

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner: Partridges are called by some writers κακκάβαι, notably by Alcman, who says:

Aye, and Alcman did put together the tongued utterance of the caccabis, to make his twine of words and music, clearly indicating that he learnt to sing from the partridges ¹

26

Antigonus of Carystus Marvels: The cock halcyons are called ceryls, and when they grow old and weak and unable to fly, their mates carry them upon their wings; and with this is connected the passage in Alcman where he says that age has made him weak and unable to whirl round with the choirs and with the dancing of the maidens:

O maidens of honey voice so loud and clear, my limbs can carry me no more Would O would God I were but a ceryl, such as flies fearless of heart with the halcyons over the bloom of the wave, the Spring's own bird that is purple as the sea! ²

Aristides On Rhetoric And what saith the praiser and counsellor of the maidens, the poet of Sparta?

Be the man's name Say-much, the woman's Glad-of-all,

by which he means 'let the man speak and the woman be content with whatsoever she shall hear.'

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner [on poultry] That they say ῥοῦεις for ῥοῦιθες 'birds' in the plural is obvious from the above testimony of Menander; but Alcman also says somewhere

Aristides On the Extemporised Addition: In another passage, by way of displaying the greatness of his own fame, Alcman makes so preposterous an enumeration of peoples, that the hapless scholar to this day is trying to find out where in the world they can be, and it would pay him better, I think, to retrace his steps for many miles than to spend his time over the Sciapods or Shadow-feet

LOVE-SONGS

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner [on love]. Archytas the writer on musical theory maintains according to Chamaeleon that the originator of love-songs was Alcman, and that he was the first to give out to the schools¹ song that was licentious in matters concerning women, and other poetry of that kind, and that hence he says in one of his songs:

| Lo, at the Cyprian's hest, sweet Love distils upon me and melts my heart.

And he says too that he fell wildly in love with Megalostрата, who was both a poetess and had the power of attracting lovers by her conversation. He speaks of her thus:

. . . to whom hath been shown the gift of the sweet Muses at the hands of one that is right happy among maidens, to wit the flaxen-haired Megalostiata.

Hephaestion Handbook of Metre [the cretic]: And it will be a catalectic hexameter—namely that called Alcman's—composed entirely of cretics, as:

It is not Aphroditè; but wild Love, like a child, plays me touch-me-not-with-your-little-reed, treading softly on tiptoe.²

¹ i.e. set choruses to learn in the song-schools: cf. Theophr. Char. 30. 18 ἱμάτιον ἐκδοῦναι πλῦναι, 'send his cloak to be cleaned' ² ref to some game like our 'touch' or 'tig'; he means he is not really in love, it is 'only a flutter'

LIFE

Herodotus Histories. Periander was despot of Corinth. During his lifetime, according to the Corinthians—and indeed the Lesbians—a very marvellous thing took place, namely the rescue of Arion of Methymna from the sea at Taenarum by a dolphin. This Arion was the finest singer to the lyre then known, and is the first recorded composer of dithyrambs, which he named and trained Corinthian choirs to perform. It seems that he spent most of his life at the court of Periander; but one day conceiving a desire to visit Italy and Sicily, he did so, and some time afterwards, having made large sums of money there, determined to return to Corinth. Accordingly he set sail from Tarentum, chartering a vessel manned by Corinthians, a people whom he thought, of all men, he could trust. But when they reached the open sea the crew conspired to secure his money by throwing him overboard . . . Putting on all his harper's dress and grasping his lyre, he took his stand in the stern-sheets, and went through the Orthian or High-pitched Nome from beginning to end. Then he threw himself just as he was, dress and all, into the sea. The crew continued their voyage to Corinth; but meanwhile a dolphin, it seems, took Arion upon his back and carried him ashore at Taenarum . . . There is a small bronze votive-offering of Arion on the promontory of Taenarum, consisting of a man upon a dolphin's back. •

LIFE OF ARION

Proclus Chrestomathy: According to Pindar the dithyramb was invented at Corinth, and we are told by Aristocles that the originator of this song was Arion, the first trainer of the cyclic or circular chorus.

Eusebius Chronicle: Fourth year of the 40th Olympiad (B.C. 617): Flourished Arion of Methymna, who was rescued by a dolphin off Taenarum.

Scholiast on Aristophanes [cyclic-chorus-trainer]: Antipater and Euphronius . . . declare that the cyclic or circular choruses were first assembled by Lasus . . . The earlier authorities, however, namely Hellanicus and Dicaearchus, ascribe their origin to Arion of Methymna, the former in his List of Carnean Victors and the latter in his Treatise on the Musical Contests.

Suidas Lexicon: Arion: Of Methymna, lyric poet, son of Cycleus, flourished in the 38th Olympiad (B.C. 628-625). According to some authorities he was a pupil of Alcman. He composed songs, namely two Books of Preludes to Epic poems. He is also said to have been the inventor of the tragic style, and to have been the first to assemble a chorus, to sing a dithyramb, to give that name to the song of the chorus, and to introduce Satyrs speaking in metre

Poseidon ascribed to Arion; this hymn being of much later date will be found in vol. iii (p. 478), for other refs. see Pauly-Wiss. Real-Encycl

It seems that the courtesans of Nau-cratis are particularly attractive. At any rate the one of whom we are speaking became so famous as to be a household word throughout the Greek world. . . . Preserved by the Scholiast on Pindar: On the Nine Lyric Poets: Now shall you learn the birth-place and lineage of the great lyric poets, and behold both their fathers and their language. First was Alcaeus of Mytilene, the most honoured [or eldest] of them all, a resonant son of Aeolus; and next to him one of the same city and speech, Sappho daughter of Eurygyus and Cleis . . .

LIFE OF SAPPHO

Seneca Letters to Lucilius: The grammarian Didymus wrote four thousand books. I should pity him if he had merely read so many useless works. The list includes treatises in which he discusses the birthplace of Homer, the true mother of Aeneas, whether Anacreon was more of a rake than a sot, whether Sappho was a prostitute, and other questions the answers to which you ought to forget if you knew them. And then people complain that life is short.¹

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner: Naucratis too was the home of some famous and extremely beautiful courtesans. Doricha, who became the mistress of Sappho's brother Charaxus when his business took him to Naucratis, is trounced by his sister in a poem for having fleeced him.² But Herodotus calls her Rhodopis,³ not understanding that Doricha is not the same as the woman who dedicated at Delphi the famous spits mentioned by Cratinus . . .⁴ The following epigram was written on Doricha by Poseidippus, who speaks of her many times in the Aesopeia: 'Tis but your bones they adorn now, Doricha, that band for your dainty hair, that spice-breathing mantle you wrapped the fair Charaxus in, to lie breast to breast with you till 'twas time for the morning cup, yet the white speaking pages of Sappho's dear song abides and ever will. Happy your name, which Naucratis thus will keep for her own so long as sea-going ship sails up the shallows of the Nile.⁵ Moreover there was a certain Strabo Geography [the Leucadian Cliff]. This rock is surmounted by the temple of Apollo Leucâtes, and from it is the leap which is supposed to cure love, 'Where Sappho first,' to quote Menander, 'in wild love-chase of the proud Phaon, leapt from the far-seen rock. But now in accordance with my vow shall thy precinct be praised, great Lord, by reason of the Cliff Leucadian' ¹ Though Menander thus gives priority to Sappho, greater antiquaries than he assign it to Cephalus son of Deioneus. It was an old custom of the Leucadians, every year at the sacrifice to Apollo, as an apotropaic or averting rite, to throw from the cliff some guilty person to whom they had previously fastened all sorts of birds and other winged creatures which by their fluttering might break his fall, a large crowd waiting below in small boats to pick him up and if possible carry him off to safety beyond the frontier.

Servius on the Aeneid: Phaon, who was a ferryman plying for hire between Lesbos and the mainland, one day ferried over for nothing the Goddess Venus in the guise of an old woman, and received from her for the service an alabaster box of unguent Maximus of Tyre Dissertations: The love of the fair Lesbian, if it is right to argue from one age to another, was surely the same as the art of love pursued by Socrates. They both appear to me to have practised the same sort of friendship, he of males, she of females, both declaring that their beloved were many in number and that they were captivated by all beautiful persons. What Alcibiades, Charmides, and Phaedrus were to him, Gyrinna,² Atthus, and Anactoria were to her, and what his rival craftsmen, Piodicus, Gorgias, Thrasy-machus and Protagoras were to Socrates, that Gorgo and Andromeda were to Sappho, who sometimes takes them to task and at others refutes them and dissembles with them exactly like Socrates.

Ovid Letters of the Heroines [Sappho to Phaon]. I take no pleasure in the maids of Pyrrha or Methymna nor in any of the daughters of Lesbos; Anactoria is a paltry jade, and so is the fair Cydro, my eyes see no beauty now in Atthus, or in a hundred others whom I have loved here so innocently³ Bold man! what once belonged to many is now thine alone.

Philostratus Life of Apollonius of Tyana: So Apollonius entered the king's palace, accompanied by a number of people who, knowing that he had been pleased to hear of his arrival in Babylon, thought that this would gratify the king. As he passed in however, the philosopher paid no attention whatever to the wonders of the house, but walking by them as though he were travelling on the high road, called Damis to him and said: 'You asked me the other day the name of the fair Pamphylian who is said to have been associated with Sappho and to have composed the hymns they sing to Artemis of Perga in the Aeolian and Pamphylian modes' 'So I did,' he replied, 'but received no answer' 'No, my friend, but you received an account of the tunes of the hymns and the names they are known by, and how she changed the Aeolian peculiarities into her own noble Pamphylian. We then turned to something else, and you did not repeat your original request. Well, this clever woman's name was Damophyla, and she is said to have had girl-companions like Sappho, and to have composed love-poems and hymns just as she did. The hymns to Artemis are her adaptations of her teacher's work, deriving ultimately from Sapphic originals.'

Maximus of Tyre: . . . the beautiful Sappho, for so Socrates rejoices to call her because of the beauty of her lyric verse, although she was small and dark.

Ovid Letters of the Heroines [Sappho to Phaon]: If crabbed Nature has denied me beauty, I make up for the lack of it with wit; nor should you despise me for one that hath both small stature and little fame. Little I am indeed, but I have a name which fills the world, and 'tis by the measure of that I go. points out in his writings that Sappho¹ and Alcaeus made comrades of their books

Maximus of Tyre Dissertations: Socrates chides Xanthippè for weeping when he is about to die, and so does Sappho chide her daughter: 'No house that serveth the Muses hath room for grief, and so it ill-beseemeth this.'²

Palatine Anthology: Plato on Sappho: Some say there are nine Muses; but they should stop to think. Look at Sappho of Lesbos; she makes a tenth.

The Same: Nossis on herself: If you are bound for Mytilene, stranger, the city of fair dances which kindled the fierce flame of Sappho's lovelinesses,³ go not away till you have told them that I was dear to the Muses, and a daughter of Locris, and that you know my name is Nossis.⁴

The Same: Dioscorides on Sappho of Mytilene, the lyric poetess, the wonder of lyric poetry: Sweetest of all love-pillows unto the burning young, sure am I that Pieria or ivied Helicon must honour thee, Sappho, along with the Muses, seeing that thy spirit is their spirit, thou Muse of Aeolian Eresus, or that Hymen God of Weddings hath thee with him when he standeth bright torch in hand over bridal beds,

Palatine Anthology: The Garland of Meleager ¹
To whom, dear Muse, bring you this song so rich in fruit? and who is the fashioner of this your garland of minstrels? It is the work of Meleager, and he hath made it to be a keepsake for the admired Diocles. Plutarch Dinner-Table Problems [on what is the best sort of entertainment during dinner]: We were the first to fall foul of the new fashion when it came to Rome, and to deprecate the use of Plato as an after-dinner diversion and his dialogues as things to be listened to over the wine and the dessert. Why, even when they recite us Sappho or Anacreon I feel I must put down my cup for very shame.

The Same Amatorius: Sappho fully deserves to be counted among the Muses. The Romans tell how Cacus son of Vulcan sent forth fire and flames from his mouth; and Sappho utters words really mingled with fire, and gives vent through her song to the heat that consumes her heart, thus 'healing' in the words of Philoxenus 'the pain of love with the melodies of the Muse.' ¹

The Same Dinner-Table Problems: One day at Sossius's, after the singing of some songs of Sappho's, a discussion arose of the line 'Love makes a poet of the veriest boor'

Aulus Gellus Attic Nights: When the chief courses were disposed of and the time was come for wine and conversation, Antonius expressed a wish that we might be favoured with a performance by the first-rate singers and players of both sexes whom he knew our young friend to have at command. In due time the young musicians were summoned, and proceeded to give delightful renderings not only of a number of the songs of Anacreon and Sappho but also of some charming erotic elegies, as they are called, of modern composers.

Lucian Loves: If women had a parliament and law-courts and a share in politics, you would have been elected general or president, Charicles, and they would have put up bronze statues in your honour in the market-place. Indeed, had all the wisest and cleverest of their own sex been given the opportunity, they could hardly have proved better champions of its cause, not even Telesilla, who took arms against the Spartan nobles and thus caused Ares to be reckoned at Argos a woman's God, nor yet Sappho, the delicious glory of the Lesbians, or Theano the daughter of the wisdom of Pythagoras. Nay, Pericles could hardly have made out so good a case for Aspasia.

The Same On Paid Companions. For ladies make a great point of having persons of education in their pay, to attend upon them and accompany them when they go abroad in their chairs, since there is nothing on which they pride themselves more than that it should be said that they are ladies of culture and learning and write poems almost as good as Sappho's.

Cicero Orations against Verres: The Sappho which was stolen from the town-hall of Syracuse,¹ that, I admit, almost grants you extenuation. Could this work of Silanion, so perfect, so refined, so finished, be in fitter hands public or private than those of a man so refined and cultured as Verres? . . . Greek couplet inscribed upon the base, which this cultured Grecian who can really criticise such things, who is the only man who understands such things, would never have dreamt of leaving behind if he had known a single letter of the Greek alphabet. For the inscription on the empty base declares to-day what the statue was, thus proclaiming the theft.¹

Dionysius of Halicarnassus² Demosthenes: Next comes the finished or decorative style, the style which makes for elegance rather than grandeur. In the first place it invariably prefers the smoothest and gentlest words, seeking euphony and melodiousness and their resultant charm. Secondly, it does not put its words just as they come or combine them without consideration, but first decides what elements will combine to give the most musical effect, and what arrangement will produce the most taking combinations, paying very great attention to the coherence of the parts and the perfection of the joinery. . . . Such appear to me to be the characteristics of this style. For examples of it I may mention, in poetry, Hesiod, Sappho, and Anacreon, and in prose, Isocrates the Athenian and his school.

Demetrius on Style: The forms, then, of literary charm are many and various. But charm may also reside in the subject. For instance, it may be the Gardens of the Nymphs, a wedding, a love-affair, in short the entire subject-matter of the poetry of Sappho. Such themes are charming even if treated

*Himerius Oration*s: So it is time for us, my children, since we are summoning our Muses to marriage-dance and marriage-love, to relax the graveness of our music, so that we may the better trip it with the maidens in honour of Aphrodite. How hard it is to find a tune gentle enough to please the Goddess, we may judge from the poets themselves, most of whom, though past masters in love-poetry, went as bravely to the description of Hera as any boy or girl, but when it came to the rites of Aphrodite, left the song for the lyre and the making of the epithalamy entirely to Sappho, who when the contests¹ are over enters the chamber, weaves the bower, makes the bride-bed, gathers the maidens into the bride-chamber, and brings Aphrodite in her Grace-drawn car with a bevy of Loves to be her playfellows; and her she adorns with hyacinths about the hair, leaving all but what is parted by the brow to float free upon the wayward breeze, and then she decks with gold on wing and tress and makes to go on before the car and wave their torches on high²

We may acquiesce in the unbounded—or shall I say excessive—praises given their beloved by Sappho and Anacreon, because both loved and lover were private individuals and there was no danger to be apprehended if their praises should turn the beloved head. But the love of which I speak now is Imperial, and so is the beloved.² . . .

1 TO APHRODITE

Dionysius of Halicarnassus Literary Composition:¹ The finished and brilliant style of composition . . . has the following characteristics . . . It would not be out of place for me to enumerate here the finest exponents of it. Among epic writers I should give the first place in this style to Hesiod, among lyrists to Sappho, with Anacreon and Simonides next to her, among tragic poets there is only one example, Euripides. Among historians, to be exact, there is none, but Ephorus and Theopompus show it more than most; among the orators I should choose Isocrates. I will now give illustrations of this style, taking Sappho to represent the poets and Isocrates the orators; and I will begin with the lyrist:

Aphrodite splendour-throned² immortal, wife-weaving child of Zeus, to thee is my prayer. Whelm not my heart, O Queen, with suffering and sorrow, but come hither I pray thee, if ever ere this thou hast heard and marked my voice afar, and stepping from thy Father's house harnessed a golden chariot, and the strong pinions of thy two swans³ fair and swift, whirring from heaven through mid-sky, have drawn thee towards the dark earth, and lo! were there; and thou, blest Lady, with a smile on that immortal face, didst gently ask what ailed me, and why I called, and what this wild heart would have done, and 'Whom shall I make to give thee room in her heart's love, who is it, Sappho, that does thee wrong?' for even if she flees thee, she shall soon pursue; if she will not take thy gifts, she yet shall give; and if she loves not, soon love she shall, whether or no;—

O come to me now as thou camest then, to assuage my sore trouble and do what my heart would fain have done, thyself my stay in battle.

The verbal beauty and the charm of this passage lie in the cohesion and smoothness of the joinery. Word follows word inwoven according to certain natural affinities and groupings of the letters . . .

[Longinus] The Sublime. Since everything is naturally accompanied by certain affixes or accidents coexistent with its substance, it follows that we should find the source of sublimity in the invariable choice of the most suitable ideas, and the power to make these a single whole by combining them together. The first attracts the listener by the choice of subject-matter the second by the cohesion of the ideas we choose. Sappho, for instance, always expresses the emotions proper to love-madness by means of its actual and visible concomitants. If you ask where she displays her excellence, I reply that it is where she shows her skill, first in choosing, and then in combining, the best and the most marked of those concomitants. Compare this

It is to be a God, methinks, to sit before you and listen close by to the sweet accents and winning laughter which have made the heart in my breast beat fast, I wariant you. When I look on you, Brocheo,¹ my speech comes short or fails me quite, I am tongue-tied²; in a moment a delicate fire has overrun my flesh, my eyes grow dim and my ears sing, the sweat runs down me and a trembling takes me altogether, till I am as green and pale as the grass,³ and death itself seems not very far away;⁴—but now that I am poor, I must fain be content⁵. . .

Is it not marvellous how she has recourse at once to spirit, body, hearing, tongue, sight, flesh, all as quite separate things, and by contraries both freezes and burns, raves and is sane, and indeed is afraid she is nearly dead, so that she expresses not one emotion but a concourse of emotions? Now all such things are characteristic of the lover, but it is the choice, as I said, of the best and the combination of them into a single whole, that has produced the excellence of the piece⁶

. . . [the Muses] who have made me honoured by the gift of their work

Aristides On the Extemporised Addition: I think you must have heard how Sappho, too, once boasted to certain women reputed prosperous, that the Muses had given herself the true happiness and good fortune, and even when she was dead she would not be forgotten.

e.g. But I have received true prosperity from | the golden Muses, and when I die I shall | not be forgot.

12¹

Ath Doctors at Dinner: For free women to this day and girls will call a friend or acquaintance 'hetaira' or 'comrade,' as Sappho does:

These songs I will sing right well to day for the delight of my comrades.

13²

Etymologicum Magnum: As instead of δαμῶ 'subdue' we find δαμείω, so for θῶ 'do' we find θέω; compare Sappho.

For those I have done good to, do me the greatest wrong.

Ammonius Words which Differ: Ἄπρι differs from ἀπρίως; for Ἄπρι is an adverb of time, whereas ἀπρίως is used of that which is fully completed; so Sappho is wrong in saying:

The golden-slipped Dawn had just [come] upon me [when] . . . ;

38 To ANACTORIA¹

From a Second-Century Papyrus.

The fairest thing in all the world some say is a host of foot, and some again a navy of ships, but to me 'tis the heart's beloved. And 'tis easy to make this understood by any. Helen, who far surpassed all mankind in beauty, chose for the best of men the destroyer of all the honour of Troy, and thought not so much either of child or parent dear, but was led astray by Love to bestow her heart afar; for woman is ever easy to be bent when she thinks lightly of what is near and dear. See to it then that you remember us Anactoria, now that we² are parted from one of whom I would rather the sweet sound of her footfall and the sight of the brightness of her beaming face than all the chariots and armoured footmen of Lydia. I know that in this world man cannot have the best; yet to wish that one had a share [in what was once shared is better than to forget it.]³

From the Same and another of the Third Century:

Make stand beside me in a dream, great Hera, the beauteous shape that appeared in answer to the prayer of the famous kings of Atreus' seed when they had made an end of the overthrow of Troy.
At first when they put forth hither from Scamander's swift flood, they could not win home, but ere that could be, were fain to make prayer to thee and to mighty Zeus and to Thyone's lovely child¹ So now
e. g. pray I, O Lady, that of thy grace I may do again, as of old, things pure and beautiful among the maids of Mytilene, whom I have so often taught to dance and to sing upon thy feast-days; and even as Atreus' seed by grace of thee and thy fellow-Gods did put out then from Ilium, so I beseech thee, Hera, aid thou at my prayer this homeward voyage of mine.

Hephaestion Handbook of Metre [on the Aeolic line]. Of the acatalectic kinds of Aeolic verse the pentameter is called the Sapphic fourteen syllable, in which is written the whole of Sappho's second Book, compare 'I loved ago'

Plutarch Amatorius For the yielding of the female to the male is called by the ancients χάρις 'grace', compare Pindar where he says that the Centaur was born of Hera 'without grace,' and Sappho's use of ἄχαρις 'graceless' of the girl who was not yet ripe for marriage, 'You seemed child' preserving what was prob S's own arrangement, that according to subject matter, the former being presumably made from the latter, it is only to be expected that some at least of the metrically-arranged Books would end with epithalamies if they formed the last Book of the earlier edition, cf. the final poem of Book VII (135)

Herodian Words without Parallel: οὐρανός 'heaven'. Oxytone trisyllabic nouns ending in -nos preceded by ᾗ which has a consonant before it, never have the first syllable long by nature . . . And so οὐρανός is remarkable in beginning with a syllable which is long by nature. But Alcaeus uses the form with either ὄ or ὅ, saying ὠρανός with the change of the diphthong ou to ô, and also, without the u, ὀρανός, so that the exception we are discussing does not hold in his case. And Sappho says, using the form with ὅ.

mingled with the sound of the rattle, aye, and the maidens sang clear and well a holy song, till a marvellous great sound rose to the sky [and the Gods in heaven] laughed. Everywhere in the ways was festal mirth, for bowls and cups were mixed, and myrrh and cassia and frankincense curled aloft. Meanwhile the elder women raised a loud cry, and all the men shouted amain a delightful song of thanksgiving unto the Far-Darting God of the lyre, and hymned the praise of the god-like Hector and Andromache.

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner. And Sappho, when in the fifth Book of her Lyric Poems she says to Aphrodite · means the handkerchief as an adornment of the head, as is shown also by Hecataeus or the writer, whoever he was, of the book entitled The Guide to Asia, in the words 'And the women wear handkerchiefs on their heads'

... and hanging on either side thy face the purple handkerchief which Timas sent for thee from Phocaea, a precious gift from a precious giver, ¹

¹ prob the description of a dream, T. having sent the kerchief for S's statue of Aphrodite (cf Rouse Gl Votive Offerings 404, 275, A P 6 270, 337, 340), and this being the letter of thanks, there is a pun on Timas and timia (precious), the previous lines were perh to this effect (cf fr 123): 'Last night thou appearedst to me in a dream, O golden-wreathed Aphrodite, plaiting the ambrosial hair of thy immortal head,' ² Jul inserts 'for come you truly have in your letter, though you are far away' ³ the latter half of the fragment is preserved further on in this adaptation, 'Bless you also, I say, thrice over, as the beautiful S says, and not only for just so long as you and I have been parted, but rather for ever'

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner : Do you think that delicacy or refinement without virtue is a thing to be desired? Why, Sappho, who was a woman out and out and a poetess, too, hesitated nevertheless to separate refinement from honour, for she says •

O come hither, ye Muses, from your golden [house] . . .

130¹ TO CLEIS

The Same: Another kind of 'unconnectable' line which similarly involves the first 'antipathy,' is formed from a trochaic dimeter acatalectic and an iambic of three feet and a half which by a shifting of the caesura becomes a trochaic procatalectic:

I have a pretty little daughter who looks like a golden flower, my darling Cleis, for whom I would not take all Lydia, nay nor lovely [Lesbos]

Of these lines, the second is shown by the caesura to be composed, as I have said, of the trochaic dimeter acatalectic and the iambic of three feet and a half; the first, having the caesura a syllable earlier, becomes procatalectic, composed of a trochaic of three feet and a half, 'ἔστι μοι κάλα πᾶις,' and a dimeter acatalectic, 'χρυσόλοισιν ἀνθέμοισιν'; while the third consists of a hypercatalectic trochaic, 'ἀντὶ τᾶς ἔγω οὐδὲ Λυδῖαν,' and a brachycatalectic, 'παῖσαν οὐδ' ἐράνναν'

¹ of Sch Heph the ancient metrists made Κλ ὀ - ο, reading 8 stresses with 'rests' after πᾶις, μόρφαν, and Λυδῖαν; edd who suppose them wrong read 7 stresses and no rests, taking χρ as 3 syll., Κλεῦις and Λύδ as 2

Palatine Anthology: Ascribed to Sappho:¹

I am a little maid who cannot talk, but yet, if I am asked a question, I say plain enough with the voice that never wearies of speech at my feet: 'I was dedicated to the Aethopian Child of Leto by Aristo daughter of Hermocleitus son of Saunaidas, a ministrant, thou Lady of women, of thine; to whom in gratitude bound be thou gracious, and give our family good fame'

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner According to some accounts the wine bearer of the Gods was Harmonia . But Alcaeus makes Hermes also their wine-bearer, as indeed Sappho does in the following passage

There stood a mixing-bowl of ambrosia ready mixed, and Heimes took the wine-jug to pour out for the Gods And then they all took up the beakers, and pouring a libation wished all manner of good luck to the bridegroom ²

Himerius Epithalamy of Severus: And if an ode were needed I should give such a song as this. Bride that teemest with rosy desires, bride the fairest ornament of the Queen of Paphos, hie thee to bed, hie thee to the couch whereon thou must sweetly sport in gentle wise with thy bridegroom And may the Star of Eve lead thee full willingly to the place where thou shalt marvel at the silver-throned Lady of Wedlock ³

Demetrius On Style: And there is a charm peculiarly Sapphic in metabole or change, when having said something she turns round and, as it were, changes her mind, for instance:

Up with the rafters high,
*Ho for the wedding!*¹
 Raise them high, ye joiners,
Ho for the wedding!
 The bridegroom's as tall as Ares,
Ho for the wedding!
 Far taller than a tall man,
Ho for the wedding!
 Towering as the Lesbian poet
Ho for the wedding!
 Over the poets of other lands,
Ho for the wedding!

as it were interrupting herself because she has used an impossible hyperbole, no one really being as tall as Ares

149²

The Same: Sometimes, too, Sappho derives charm from anaphora or repetition, as in this passage, of the Evening Star.

Evening Star that bringest back all that lightsome
 Dawn hath scattered afar, thou bringest the sheep,

¹ the refrain, omitted by Dem., occurs in Heph., who quotes ll 1-5 to illustrate the 'intervening' refrain: ll. 9-11 from Dem. Et 146 'by comparison, moreover, S. says of the very tall man "Towering, etc."; for the comparison there conveys charm rather than a sense of size' ² cf. EM Vet 129, E.M. 174. 43, E.G. 212 43, 446 3, Sch. Scholiast on Hermogenes Kinds of Style: For some kinds of style express but one sort of idea, for instance the pure or simple kind, others two, three, or even four, for instance the noble and those which resemble it, such as the kinds used by historians—which, indeed, as Thucydides says, approximate to those employed by mythographers because they are concerned with chronology—, or such as give pleasure to the senses, sight, hearing, smell, taste, touch, as Homer. (Iliad 347 f); or Sappho: (4), and:

Where the pickers forgot it—nay,
Could not reach it so far away;²

or Theocritus: (8. 78) and (3. 54)

151

Demetrius On Style: The so-called epiphoneme may be defined as a phrase which adds adornment, and it is supreme as an elevator of style. It should be remembered that a phrase either aids the sense or adorns it. For instance, the sense is aided by such a phrase as 'Like the hyacinth' etc while it is adorned by the words which follow, 'and it still blooms' etc. The addition thus made to the foregoing sentence is clearly an adornment or embellishment . . . In general the epiphoneme is like the shows or displays of the rich, such as the cornices and triglyphs of their houses and the purple borders of their robes. For it is essentially a mark of wealth in words.

SAPPHO

Demetrius On Style: Very different is the style in which she (Sappho) mocks the boorish¹ bridegroom and the keeper of the wedding-door. It is quite commonplace, and the words are better suited to prose than to poetry. Indeed these poems of hers can be better spoken than sung, and would not be fitting for the dance or the lyre, unless for a sort of speaking-dance.²

Synesius Letters The name which is wronged by the ill-behaviour (of a certain bride at her uncle's funeral) is that of Haimonius, Master Doorkeeper's father, who, as Sappho would say, in other respects lived a decent and honest life, but claimed to be better born than Cecrops himself.

155, 156

Hephaestion Handbook of Metre [on 'unconnectable' metres] And the same poetess (Sappho) uses the choriambic of three feet and a half with the iambic close:

Happy bridegroom, the marriage is accomplished as you prayed it should be, and the maiden you prayed for is yours;

and in some places she lets a word overlap into the second part of the line and soft and gentle is shed over her delightful face. . . .³

Himerius Epithalamy of Severus Come then, let us take this discourse of ours into the chamber and introduce it to the beauty of the bride 'O beauteous one, etc. (for thou deservest the praise of the Lesbian poetess), thine it is, etc.'⁴ due to the licence regularly allowed in the 1st foot (cf Heph. 44): according to the Scholiast Thyrōrus ('Doorkeeper') was the name of a brother of the deceased (who was son of Syn's friend H and uncle of the bride)³ probably from the same poem; the subject of the verb is probably 'love'

Servius on Vergil: Many commentators hold that son-in-law is here used for husband, as it is by Sappho, who in the Book entitled Epithalamies says.

Farewell, bride, and farewell, honoured bridegroom!¹

Dionysius On Literary Composition [on Demosthenes Against Aristocrates 1] The clause which follows this consists of two metres put together: 'μήτε μικρὸν δρῶντά τι καὶ φαῦλον ἀμάρτημ' ἐτοίμως οὕτως ἐπὶ τούτῳ.' Now if we take this line of a wedding-song of Sappho's:

For never, bridegroom, was there another maiden such as this;

and after inserting a 'rest' join it with the last three feet and the incomplete final foot of the comic tetrameter—known as the Aristophanean—in the following way: οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἄτέρα πάϊς ὃ γάμβρε τοαῦτα [rest] καὶ σωφροσύνη νενόμιστο, we shall find the resulting metre the same as that of 'μήτε μικρὸν' κ.τ.λ.

164

Demetrius On Style: The charm which comes from the use of figures of speech is obvious and manifold in Sappho; for instance, from repetition, where a bride says to her virginity:

Maidenhead, maidenhead, whither away?

and it replies in the same figure :

Where I must stay, bide, where I must stay.

For there is more charm in it put thus than if the figure were not employed and it were said but once. Now repetition would seem to have been invented more with a view to an effect of energy or force,¹ but Sappho employs even what is most forceful in a charming way

Demetrius On Style : And that is why when Sappho sings of beauty her words are full of beauty and sweetness, and the same when she sings of love and springtime and the halcyon, and the pattern of her poetry is inwoven with every beautiful word there is, some of them made by herself.

Strabo Geography : Canae is a little town of the Locrians of Cynus opposite the southernmost Cape of Lesbos, situated in Canaea, a district which extends as far as the islands of Arginusae and the cape which lies near them. This cape is called by some writers Aiga 'the goat,' after the animal; but the second syllable ought rather to be made long, Aigā, like ἀκρά and ἀρχά; for that is the name of the whole mountain which is now called Cane or Canae; . . . later the actual promontory seems to have been known as Aigā, as Sappho gives it, and eventually as Cane or Canae.

Athens for the possession of the Achilleid (or district of Sigeum in the Troad), he was in command on the one side and the Olympian champion Phrynon on the other. The two generals coming to single combat, Pittacus enveloped his antagonist unawares in a net which he carried under his shield, and killed him, thus saving the district for Mytilene. Later, however, if we may believe the Chronicles of Apollodorus, it became the subject of arbitration between the two cities, and Periander, who acted as judge, awarded it to Athens. However that may be, Pittacus was highly honoured thereafter by his countrymen, and made head of the state. After holding office ten years, during which he brought order into the administration, he resigned it and lived for ten years more as a private citizen¹

Diogenes Laertius Lives of the Philosophers: According to Heracleitus, when Alcaeus fell into his hands Pittacus set him at liberty with the words 'Forgiveness is better than punishment.'

Horace Odes: . . . Come sing me a Latin song, thou lyre first played by a citizen of Lesbos, a gallant warrior who, alike amid the very fight or when his storm-tossed ship was moored to the wet shore,² sang of Bacchus and the Muses, of Venus and her inseparable boy, and of the beautiful Lycus so dark of eye and hair.

The Same . . . and thee, Alcaeus, chanting with fuller note unto thy golden quill the toils of the sea, the toils of exile, and the toils of war³

Dionysius of Halicarnassus Critique of the Ancient Writers. only look at the nobility of Alcaeus, his conciseness, his sweetness—so far as they are not impaired by his dialect—, and above all the moral tone of his Political Poems. Often if the reader could but remove the metrie he would find political rhetoric.⁴

Quintilian Principles of Oratory: Alcaeus is rightly awarded the 'golden quill' in that part of his works where he assails the tyrants; his ethical value too is great, and his style is concise, lofty, exact, and very like Homer's; but he stoops to jesting and love-making though better fitted for higher themes.

LIFE OF ALCAEUS

Hephaestion On Graphical Signs: The asterisk is usually employed if the poem which follows is in a different metre. This is more often the case with those composed in triads than with the monostrophic poems of Sappho, Anacreon, and Alcaeus. The poems of Alcaeus are peculiar in this, that in the Aristophanic edition the asterisk was used only to mark a change of metre, but in the now current edition of Aristarchus it marks a fresh poem whatever the metre.

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner Having completed my digression on ancient methods of mixing wine, I will resume my theme and consider what the lyric poet Alcaeus means by the phrase 'Mix ere you pour it one and two.' Some authorities hold that he does not refer to the proportion of wine to water but, being a temperate man, would have us drink first one ladleful of unmix'd wine and then two, and no more. This is the interpretation of Chamaeleon of Pontus, but he does not realise how fond of the bottle Alcaeus was.¹

The Same [on the cottabos]. The love of the Sicilians for this game is proved by the fact that they went so far as to build special rooms to play it in, as we are told by Dicaearchus in his tract On Alcaeus ²

Strabo Geography [on Lesbos] the historian Hellanicus, too, was a Lesbian, and Callias the commentator on Sappho and Alcaeus.³

HYMNS

I TO APOLLO

Himerius Orations: I will tell you likewise one of Alcaeus' tales, a tale which he sang in lyric verse when he wrote a paean to Apollo. And I tell it you not according to the Lesbian verse—for I am not of poetic humour—but changing the actual metre of the lyric verse into prose. When Apollo was born, Zeus furnished him forth with a golden headband and a lyre, and giving him moreover a chariot to drive—and they were swans that drew it—, would have him go to Delphi and the spring of Castaly, thence to deliver justice and right in oracles to Greece. Nevertheless once he was mounted in the chariot, Apollo bade his swans fly to the land of the Hyperboreans. Now when the Delphians heard of it, they set a paean to a tune and held dances of youths about the tripod, and besought the God to come back thence. Yet Apollo dealt law among those of that country for a whole year. Then, when he thought it was time that the tripods of Delphi, too, should give sound, he bade the swans fly back again from the Hyperboreans. Now it is summer, and the very midst of summer, when Alcaeus brings Apollo back from that land, and therefore with the summer brightly shining and Apollo present, the lyre, too, puts on a summer wantonness concerning the God. Nightingales sing to him as birds might well sing in Alcaeus, swallows also sing and crickets, not announcing their own fortunes in the world but telling in all their tunes of the God. Castaly, in poetic style, flows with springs of silver, and great Cephissus lifts himself with his waves all shining, in imitation of the Enipeus of Homer. For Alcaeus, like Homer, perforce makes the water able to know that a God is present.

Hephaestion Handbook of Metre. The epionic trimeter a minore is acatalectic, the so-called Alcaic eleven-syllable . . . for instance.

Porphyrio on Horace Ode 1 10 ['Mercury, thou eloquent son of Atlas' daughter']. A hymn to Mercury by the lyric poet Alcaeus

The Same ['Thee it was, at whom once Apollo smiled when as a babe thou tookest his quiver while he sought to terrify thee with threats because of thy theft of his oxen'] This story (the theft of the quiver) originated with Alcaeus, and thus for the second time Mercury is made the discoverer of thieving because of the deception wrought by oratory, the art he invented.

Scholast on Iliad ['Apollo wielder of gold']. Hermes, the son of Zeus and Maia daughter of Atlas, discovered the lyre, and having stolen the oxen of Apollo was found out by the God's power of divination. But when Apollo threatened him, he stole the very bow and arrows that were upon his shoulder. Whereat the God smiled, and gave him the divining-staff from which Hermes came to be called 'God of the golden wand,' and received from him the lyre which has given him the name of 'the wielder of gold' from the strap to which the lyre is fastened ²

Plutarch Amatorius. Although the poets generally seem to write and sing praise of Love in a jesting mood, sometimes, whether of their own choice and reflexion or by the grace of God, they get at the truth and treat of him seriously, as for instance in the matter of his birth:

. . . thee, awfulest of Gods, sandalled Iis bore to Zephyr of the golden hair poetry, and therefore prides himself on things of war in the following words:

Heracleitus Homeric Allegories: We shall find the lyric poet of Mytilene using allegory in a considerable number of passages. He likens the disturbances caused by the tyrants very literally to stormy weather at sea.

I cannot tell the lie of the wind,¹ one wave rolls from this quarter, another from that, and we are carried in the midst with the black ship, labouring in an exceeding great storm. The water is up to the mast-hole, the sail lets daylight through with the great rents that are in it, and the halyards² are working loose³

Who hearing this would not conclude immediately from the moving sea-imagery that the fear conveyed by the words is fear of the sea on the part of men aboard ship? Yet it is not so, for the poet means Myrsilus and a monarchical conspiracy hatching against the Mytileneans. And he similarly hints at Myrsilus' intrigues in another place:

Lo now! the wave that is to windward of us comes this way, and will give us sore labour to bale it out when it breaks over us.⁴

In fact the islander almost overdoes the sea-going in his allegories, likening most of the prevailing tyrant-troubles to storms on the ocean.

Herodian Words without Parallel: The God Poseidon has the a and the s in Alcaeus:

. . . nor had Poseidan yet roughened the salt sea

41 [TO HIS COUNTRY]

From a First-Century Papyrus.

What purpose or intent is in thee, my Country, that thou hast been so long time distraught? Be of good cheer; for the son of Cronus himself¹ did tell thee that thou hadst no need to fear warfare howsoever it should seize thee, nor should neighbour foeman, nay nor oarsman from over the far-bounded sea, maintain for long the woeful conflict of the far-flung spear, unless thou shouldst of thyself send afar all the best of thy people, to sunder them from thee.² For 'tis men that are a city's tower in war. But alas! thou no longer doest the Father's will, and so a swift fate hath overtaken thee, and us that had been sent to help thee, Zeus—for so he had willed it—hath made to miscarry³ and taken away from thee again. And let whoso will, bring thee assuagement of thy woes.

Yet not a thing of to-day nor of yesterday is the death-dealing robe⁴ in which thou art clad

³ ref. either to an attempt of the exiles to return by force of arms or rejection by M. of an offer of the exiles to return and combine with him against an external foe ⁴ like Nessus' poisoned shirt which caused the death of Heracles

ALCAEUS

These woes began for thee with Tenages, son of Aeolus, that was slain of yore by the sword of his brother Macar,¹ a sword that left sorrow behind it. And now I make this prayer concerning thee: that I may no longer see the daylight, if the son of Cleanax² or yonder Splittfoot³ or the son of Archeanax be suffered yet to live by one whom his dear sweet native-land, and factious strife as old as itself, together have done away.

Eust on the Odyssey [they were diverting themselves at draughts] The author of the treatise On Greek Games declares that the draughts were five pebbles with which they played upon five lines drawn on either side, so that each of the players had his own . At this there was general astonishment, and Demetrius exclaimed that it was really absurd to pursue so great a quest with such tiny equipment, not, in Alcaeus' phrase, painting a lion from the claw,

Scholiast on Sophocles ['for anger knows no old age but death']: That is, no mortal man can overcome anger. The fierceness of anger does not grow old unless the man dies, because it is impossible for a living man not to become angry. It is put proverbially in the words 'anger grows old last.' This is said because of the aged, since the older they grow the stronger grows their anger. Alcaeus gives the statement in general terms as we do

e g 'Tis said that wrath is the last thing in a | man to grow old.

LOVE POEMS

121 To MELANIPPUS³

Herodotus Histories: During the war between Mytilene and Athens . . . when a battle took place which left the Athenians victorious, the poet Alcaeus made good his escape, but his arms fell into the hands of the Athenians, who hung them up as an offering in the temple of Athena at Sigeum. This is told by Alcaeus in a poem which he sent to his friend Melanippus at Mytilene saying what had happened to him.

Strabo Geography: Pittacus of Mytilene sailed against the Athenian general Phrynon and carried on war against him for some time with ill success. It was during this campaign that the poet Alcaeus tells us how, being hard pressed, he threw away his arms and took to flight, and he addresses the following words to a herald whom he bids take tidings to his friends at home:

Athenaeus Doctors at Dinner For the poet Alcaeus is found drinking at every time and on every occasion, in the winter in these lines

The Sky-God bows himself; there is a great storm in the heavens, the streams of water are frozen fast . . . Defy the storm with a good fire and a bountiful mixing of honey-sweet wine, and then put a soft cushion on either side your brow.

158

The Same: . . . and in his misfortune, in this passage:

It is ill yielding the heart to mischance, for we shall make no advance if we weary of thee, O Bacchus, and the best medicine is to call for wine and drink deep.

Aristotle Politics: Some aesyminetes ruled for life, others only for definite periods or till they had accomplished definite tasks, as the Mytileneans chose Pittacus to deal with the exiles under Antimenidas and the poet Alcaeus. With one voice they have set up the base-born Pittacus to be tyrant of their spiritless and ill-starred country, shouting his praise by their thousands²

Soak your throttle in wine;⁴ for the star is coming round again,⁵ the season is hard to bear with the world athirst because of the heat, the cricket sounds sweetly from the leaves of the tree-top, and lo! the artichoke is blowing; now are women at their sauciest, but men lean and weak because Sirius⁵ parches both the head and the knees

From a Papyrus of about A.D. 200: On Sappho:— Sappho was by birth a Lesbian, of the city of Mytilene, her father was Scamander, or according to some writers Scamandronymus, and she had three brothers, Erigyius, Larichus, and Charaxus, who was the eldest. Charaxus, on a visit to Egypt, took up with a woman named Doucha, on whom he spent large sums of money; Sappho was more attached to Larichus, the youngest. She had a daughter Cleis called after her mother. She is accused by some writers of evil living and being a woman-lover. Her appearance seems, strangely enough, to have been contemptible and very ugly, her complexion dark and her stature of the smallest—as indeed was the case of [Aesop?]¹ who was less than (a gap of many lines). . . as we are told by Chamaeleon [of Pontus, he] is wrong in the information he [has taken] from him. ALCAEUS

181-6

Papyri Bouriant 8 (quoted by Lobel) cites from Alcaeus four very short fragments, of which the chief interest is that they are quoted from the '4th, 5th and 6th,' from 'the 9th, from the 10th,' and again from 'the 10th,' Books respectively; in a fifth fragment from the same Papyrus Lobel recognises the Hesychian gloss νυμφόβαυς nymph-mounted.

Alcaeus, Silenus riding on the Nymphs.¹

Hephaestion Handbook of Metre [on the Antispastic Trimeter]. The form of the acatalectic which has the antispast in the middle with any of the four forms of the disyllable in one foot, and on either side the iambic dipodies, of which the first begins with a spondee, is called the Alcaic twelve-syllable, for instance,
